Nominations of significant caves. The Federal Cave Resources Protection Act of 1988 (102 Stat. 4546, 16 U.S.C. 4301) requires identification, protection and maintenance, to the extent practical, of significant caves on lands managed by the Department of the Interior. The implementing regulations are found at 43 CFR 37—Cave Management. The regulations were issued on October 1, 1993 (58 FR 51554). Federal agencies must consult with “cavers” and other interested parties to develop a listing of significant caves. The regulations establish criteria for the identification of significant caves. The regulations also integrate cave management into existing planning and management processes and protect cave resource information to prevent vandalism and disturbance of significant caves.

The public and other government agencies provide (a) name and address, (b) name and phone number of a key contact, (c) cave name, (d) cave location, (e) topographic and/or cave map(s), (f) name of the administering Federal agency and agency field office name and address where the cave is located, (g) description of the cave, and (h) description of the applicable criteria for significant caves (biota, cultural, geologic/mineralogic/paleontologic, hydrologic, recreational, and/or educational or scientific). The Department uses the information provided to determine which caves will be listed as significant. If the Department did not collect the information, it could not identify, manage, and protect significant caves in accordance with the law.

This collection of information is short, simple, and limited to the information necessary for efficient operation of the program. The information collected is a voluntary, non-recurring submission necessary to receive a benefit. There is no other source for the information, and failure by the respondent to furnish the required information will result in a “significant” cave not receiving appropriate protection. The respondents already maintain this information for their own record-keeping purposes and need only compile it.

Based on the Department’s experience administering cave resources as described above, the public reporting burden for the information collected for significant cave nominations is estimated to average three hours per response. The estimate includes time for research, time to transcribe and audit the data, and time to prepare the nomination. The number of responses per year is estimated to be about 200. The frequency of response is once per nomination. The estimated total annual burden on new respondents is 600 hours.

Access to confidential cave information. Other Federal or State governmental agencies, bona fide educational or research institutes, or individuals or organizations assisting the land management agency with cave management activities may request access to confidential cave information. The written request includes (a) name, address and telephone number of the person responsible for the security of the information, (b) a legal description of the cave location, (c) a statement of the purpose of the request, and (d) written assurance that the requesting party will maintain the confidentiality of the information and protect the cave and its resources. The Department uses the information provided to determine whether disclosure will create a substantial risk to cave resources. If the Department did not collect the information, it could not identify, manage, and protect significant caves in accordance with the law.

The collection of information is short, simple and convenient to the applicant. The information collected is a voluntary, non-recurring submission necessary to receive a benefit. The respondents already maintain this information for their own record-keeping purposes and need only compile it.

Based on the Department’s experience administering cave resources as described above, the information collection burden for confidential cave information requests is about one hour per request. The number of requests per year is about ten. The frequency of response is once per request. The estimated total annual burden on new respondents is ten hours.

Previously, OMB approved the nominations of significant caves and the access to confidential cave information as separate information collections, OMB approval numbers 1004–0165 and 1004–0166, respectively. For the convenience of the public, BLM plans to request that these two information collections be consolidated under one approval number.

All responses to this notice will be summarized and included in the request for Office of Management and Budget approval. All comments will also become a matter of public record.
