SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

1. Project Description

DOE proposes to implement measures to reduce or eliminate the discharge of industrial and sanitary wastewater from 29 outfalls at various facilities at LANL, Los Alamos County, New Mexico. These measures are being taken as an integral part of an overall program of corrective action to insure that wastewater discharges are environmentally safe. Action is needed to comply with federal and state water quality standards and directives issued by EPA. Corrective measures would consist of both rerouting and connecting discharges to the existing sanitary wastewater treatment system and installing recirculation systems at the source of the wastewater. Only one of the corrective actions would involve construction work outside of a building. This action would consist of the excavation of a 82-foot-long trench in a non-wetland area. No construction would occur within a wetland. Remaining discharges would come primarily from stormwater runoff.

2. Wetlands

The long-term discharge of wastewater has likely contributed to the development of small wetlands at several facilities. These wetlands have developed below outfalls and at various downstream locations in the receiving stream channel. Other facilities discharging wastewater have outfalls that are not thought to be associated with wetlands, and others have had outfalls associated with wetlands but no longer discharge wastewater to support them because of program changes.

Currently, 33 wetlands supported by wastewater discharges remain at various locations at LANL. A small number of naturally occurring wetlands are also present. These wastewater and natural wetlands provide habitat for a diversity of wildlife on both a local and area-wide scale.

Reduction or cessation of wastewater flows at 29 outfalls would likely result in the gradual reversion of wetland plant communities at 25 wetlands to plant communities adapted to drier conditions, with a resulting change in animal use. Some wetland communities could persist. Wetlands associated with the wastewater treatment facility receiving rerouted wastewater may experience a modest increase in size.

In accordance with DOE regulations for compliance with floodplain and wetlands environmental review requirements (10 CFR 1022), DOE will prepare a wetlands assessment for this proposed action. The wetlands assessment will be included as an integral part of the EA that will be prepared for this proposal in complying with NEPA.

NEPA Compliance Officer, Los Alamos Area Office, Department of Energy.
