SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: This notice announces that EPA has received from IR-4, New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station, P.O. Box 231, New Brunswick, NJ 08903-0231, an application for an EUP (69224-EUP-R) for the use of Aspergillus flavus AF36

(non-aflatoxin-producing strain) as an antimicrobial agent in or on cotton. EPA considers this EUP to be of regional or national significance and is associated with Petition No. 5E5475. The application was submitted on behalf of the Agricultural Research Service, United States Department of Agriculture, 1100 Robert E. Lee Boulevard, P.O. Box 19687, New Orleans, Louisiana, 70179-0687.

The use of Aspergillus flavus AF36 in the proposed manner is intended to prevent aflatoxin contamination of cottonseed by competitively excluding aflatoxin producing strains from infecting treated crop. The microbial pesticide is to be applied over a 3-year period at 10 pounds per acre to 1,120 acres of commercial cotton fields in Yuma County, Arizona. There will be one application per crop, thus allowing a total of 11,200 pounds per year. Applications will be made at last cultivation prior to first bloom with a cultivator mounted granular applicator. For this EUP program, the registrant proposes to treat 120 acres in year 1, and 500 acres each in years 2 and 3. Aspergillus flavus AF36 was initially isolated from this region which is most seriously affected by aflatoxin contamination. Cottonseed from treated and untreated fields will be sampled according to the Arizona Commercial Feed Law and monitored for aflatoxin content in a commercial laboratory. This experimental use program will be performed in order to assess grower response to the use of the microbial pesticide and to determine long-term and short-term influences of treating relatively large contiguous acreages. Impact within treated fields and outside treated fields will be determined and monitored over multiple years. Treated crops are intended for commercial use.

EPA has established a record for this document under docket number OPP-50815 (including comments and data submitted electronically as described below).
