SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Introduction

In response to EPA's Risk Characterization Policy (memorandum of March 21, 1995 from Carol M. Browner, EPA Administrator) the Agency's Science Policy Council (SPC) is sponsoring a series of colloquia to provide internal peer review of several EPA risk assessments as case studies. After the internal peer review is complete, the SPC plans to have several of these case studies externally peer reviewed. As part of this process, EPA's Office of Prevention, Pesticides, and Toxic Substances will submit the screening level assessment of ethylene glycol that was conducted for purposes of section 313 of the Emergency Planning and Community Right-to-Know Act (EPCRA), 42 U.S.C. 11023. This assessment was published in the Federal Register of May 7, 1997 (62 FR 24925). As part of its announcement of the peer review process, EPA invited the public to submit any scientific information that may impact the human health risk assessment of ethylene glycol. EPA is mainly seeking information directly pertaining to the human health and exposure analyses in this risk assessment conducted for the purposes of EPCRA. The notice originally provided that the comment period would close on July 7, 1997.

II. Extension of Comment Period

On May 29, 1997, EPA received a request from the Chemical Manufacturers Association (CMA) Ethylene Glycol Panel (Panel) to extend the comment period for 60 days. In their request, the Panel noted that, because the May 7 Federal Register notice did not specify the type of information in which EPA was interested, the original 60-day comment period was insufficient to thoroughly analyze the risk assessment and provide the Agency with any additional information for consideration.

EPA has considered CMA's comments and has determined that extending the comment period is appropriate, and will not cause a significant delay in the peer review process. Therefore, EPA is extending the comment period until September 5, 1997.

III. Public Record

The official record for this notice, as well as the public version, has been established for this document under docket control number OPPTS-400112 (including comments and data submitted electronically as described below).
