Special Analyses

It has been determined that this notice of proposed rulemaking is not a significant regulatory action as defined in EO 12866. Therefore, a regulatory assessment is not required. It also has been determined that section 553(b) of the Administrative Procedure Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 5) does not apply to these regulations.

It is hereby certified that these regulations will not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities. This certification is based upon the fact that the underlying statute applies only to individuals. Therefore, a Regulatory Flexibility Analysis under the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6) is not required.

Pursuant to section 7805(f) of the Internal Revenue Code, this notice of proposed rulemaking will be submitted to the Chief Counsel for Advocacy of the Small Business Administration for comment on its impact on small business.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Background

Section 1092(c) defines a straddle as offsetting positions with respect to personal property. Under section 1092(d)(3), stock is personal property if the stock is part of a straddle that involves an option on that stock or substantially identical stock or securities. Under section 1092(c)(4), however, writing a qualified covered call option and owning the optioned stock is not treated as a straddle for purposes of section 1092.

The special treatment for qualified covered calls was created because Congress believed that, in certain limited circumstances, a taxpayer who grants a call option does not substantially reduce his or her risk of loss with respect to the optioned stock. Congress established a mechanical test to determine whether a written call option could substantially reduce a taxpayer's risk of loss and, therefore, should be subject to treatment as one leg of a straddle. In order to be classified as a qualified covered call under this test, a call option must, among other things, be exchange-traded and not be deep in the money.

Section 1092(c)(4)(C) defines a deep-in-the-money option as an option whose strike price is lower than an allowed benchmark. Under section 1092(c)(4)(D), this benchmark is generally the highest available strike price for an option that is less than the applicable stock price, as defined in section 1092(c)(4)(G). The Internal Revenue Code provides other benchmarks under specified circumstances.

At the time the qualified covered call definition was written, listed options were available only at standardized maturity dates and strike price intervals. This fixed-interval system was a basic assumption of the Congressional plan for qualified covered calls and, more specifically, was the foundation for the definition of a deep-in-the-money option.

Certain options exchanges have begun to trade put and call equity options with flexible terms. The terms that are flexible include strike price, expiration date, and exercise style (that is, American, European, or capped). Except
