

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The regulations regarding the implementation of section 112(g) of the Clean Air Act for constructed or reconstructed sources as well as guidance for the State permitting authorities are found in 40 CFR 63.40–63.44 (subpart B). The final rule was published in the Federal Register on December 27, 1996 (61 FR 68384). Effective on June 29, 1998, no person may construct or reconstruct any major source of HAP in Massachusetts and Connecticut for which no applicable NESHAP has been promulgated unless that person applies for and obtains a Notice of MACT approval under the procedures set forth in 40 CFR 63.43(f)–(h). Except as provided below, the application should be submitted to EPA Region I at the address given above. In Connecticut, where Connecticut Department of Environmental Protection (CT DEP) has the authority to issue a pre-construction permit to a constructed or reconstructed source with potential to emit greater than 15 tons per year of any individual hazardous air pollutant (HAP), CT DEP will issue the Notice of MACT approval to those subject sources after EPA concurs in writing on the MACT determination. For all other sources in Connecticut subject to section 112(g), EPA Region I will issue the Notice of MACT approval.

To apply for and obtain a Notice of MACT approval from the EPA Regional office, any source subject to subpart B must fulfill the following requirements. First, the constructed or reconstructed major source must recommend a MACT emission limitation or requirement that must not be less stringent than the emission control which is achieved in practice by the best controlled similar source (§ 63.43(d)(1)). The recommended MACT emission limitation must achieve the maximum degree of reduction in emissions of HAP which can be achieved by utilizing the recommended control techniques. The recommended MACT emission limitation must consider the non-air quality health and environmental impacts as well as the associated energy requirements (§ 63.43(d)(2)). Furthermore, the constructed or reconstructed major source may recommend a specific design, equipment, or work practice standard, and EPA may approve such a standard, if it determines that it is not feasible to prescribe or enforce an emission limitation under section 112(h)(2) of the Clean Air Act (§ 63.43(d)(3)). Finally, if the EPA has proposed a relevant emission standard through either section 112(d) or section 112(h) of the Clean Air Act, then the MACT requirements applied to the constructed or reconstructed major source must take into consideration those MACT emission limitations and requirements of the proposed standards or presumptive MACT determination (§ 63.43(d)(4)).

In reviewing and approving any application for a Notice of MACT approval, EPA will utilize the procedures set forth in 40 CFR 63.43(f)–(h).

For household use.

The Agency has considered all required data on risks associated with the proposed use of imiprothrin and cypermethrin, and information on social, economic, and environmental benefits to be derived from use. Specifically, the Agency has considered the nature of the chemical and its pattern of use, application methods and rates, and level and extent of potential exposure. Based on these reviews, the Agency was able to make basic health and safety determinations which show that use of imiprothrin and cypermethrin when used in accordance with widespread and commonly recognized practice, will not generally cause unreasonable adverse effects to the environment.

More detailed information on these registrations are contained in the EPA Pesticide Fact Sheet on imiprothrin and cypermethrin.

A copy of the fact sheet, which provides a summary description of these pesticides, use patterns and formulations, science findings, and the Agency's regulatory position and rationale, may be obtained from the National Technical Information Service (NTIS), 5285 Port Royal Road, Springfield, VA 22161.

In accordance with section 3(c)(2) of FIFRA, a copy of the approved label, the list of data references, the data and other scientific information used to support registration, except for material specifically protected by section 10 of
