

Because testing of pediatric post-mortem surrogates raises ethical concerns, researchers are compelled to find creative ways to gather biomechanical information from living children. The historical approach for obtaining body region response information is to design a fun, low-intensity activity or game where the participant movement is captured in some manner while resisting forces are collected. The forces generated with respect to the movements are used to develop a “response target” that serves as design guidance for the relevant crash dummy component.

Respondents: We estimate that 24 persons will complete the information collection. Respondents will be parents of children age 8–12.

Estimated Number of Respondents: In support of this research, it is estimated that 24 children age 8–12 will complete the activity while the parent observes.

Estimated Time per Response: The child and parent will be required to spend roughly 1 hour in the laboratory to complete the required steps associated with the activity.

Total Estimated Annual Burden: 24 hours, or 1 hour per participant.

Frequency of Collection: The data collection described will be performed once to obtain the target number of valid test participants.

Authority: 44 U.S.C. Section 3506(c)(2)(A).
